EMPLOYEE FEATURE

Miss Agatha Sepu, completed her GNM course from Rapsbun School of Nursing, Shillong in 1996. She is one of CIHSR's senior most nurses, having worked in Nazareth Hospital, Shillong, Faith hospital & Livingstone Foundation Higher secondary school, Dimapur. Apart from her interest in flower gardening, one amazing fact about sister Agatha is her magnanimity in willfully opting to adopt a baby boy who was found abandoned in the surgical ward on the 16th April 2011. By adopting this child, she has made a big difference in the life of the child and his future. Adoption isn't just a boon to the adoptive family and the child, but is often a blessing in disguise for society and even the biological parents, who for some reasons are forced to make the decision of giving away their progeny. As she shared the story of how her family (siblings) accepted Wilfred Johnny Azüvei, one is amazed to see her exceptional courage & ability to welcome the child in her family. We wish her & her family all the best! (By: Ms. Thingngamphy Vashum, HR)

How girl who drowned herself in Paris became 'most kissed face of all time'

Her enigmatic smile is known to millions around the world and she has been kissed billions of times. This is the face behind first-aid mannequin Rescue Annie. But behind her peaceful expression lies a story shrouded in rumors of heartbreak and tragedy. For the beautiful face used as the model for medical workers learning how to give the 'kiss of life' is also known as 'L'Inconnue de la Seine' - or 'the unknown woman from the Seine'.

According to popular myth, at the end of the 19th century, a young girl's lifeless body was pulled from Paris's Quai François Mitterrand, which was then called Quai du Louvre.

As no signs of violence could be found on her, it was decided she had committed suicide, with some stories suggesting it was a case of unrequited love that prompted her death. Because no one could identify her, a plaster mask of her face was made and hung outside a shop door. Her delicate beauty became popular with artists and writers, who fabricated stories about the cause of her suicide. Generations later she was still inspiring those fascinated by her mysterious story, and a practical - and life-saving - use was found for her fair visage.

According to his company website Asmund Laerdal, the founder of Laerdal Medical, based in Stavanger, Norway, became a pioneer for making resuscitation aids out of soft plastic.

A user of CPR, in the 1950s he developed Resusci Annie, otherwise known as Rescue Annie, a life-like mannequin used to train people in mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

His website says he was so moved by the unknown woman's tragic background; he adopted her mask for his first-aid doll. He was convinced that if a mannequin was life-like, students would be determined to learn the lifesaving procedure.

Millions have been taught how to breathe life into the face of the girl who is believed to have taken her own, making her the most kissed girl in the world.

Since its original introduction, several different versions of Resusci Anne have also been introduced, including ones that simulate other emergency medical conditions, such as severe wounds and trauma. (Internet)
